

JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Nancy Wynne Talks of Committee Class Meeting at Bellevue-Stratford Last Night—She Hears That Heath Bannard Is Made Captain

The Committee Class was great last night! Just lots of fun, and so many dinners before the party that I'll say everybody who belongs to the class went to some "eats" somewhere before. Catherine Cox looked particularly pretty. She has such exquisite features, don't you think? Aristocrat is written all over her; but don't think from that she's a snob, because she isn't; she's perfectly charming.

Another pretty sub-deb is Elizabeth Bartow, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bartow. She had a dinner before the dance last night and certainly looked a picture with her bright color and laughing eyes when she and her guests entered the ballroom. I see the Von Shauenest boys are going around a lot. They are staying with their grandmother, Mrs. Robert Toland. Their mother, who was Miss Matilda Toland, has come on here to stay with her mother. The boys are very attractive. They were guests at the Owen Wister dinner before the class.

They have many cousins here in the Dale and Toland connections and are bound to have a good time for their own sakes anyhow. I was amused to think that in the Saturday evening class there were three girls who, though not out, are already engaged and their engagements are announced, to say nothing of several we think are engaged but about whom no announcement has yet been made. It's the war, of course, as otherwise they would have come out, and even if engaged it would not have been announced until after the year of social doings. The three I refer to were guests of the Henry Thompkins, of Wilmington, at the Bellevue-Stratford before the dance: Mary Glendinning, whose fiancé is Morris Freeman; Marys Clark, who is engaged to George Harrison Frazier, Jr.; and Phoebe McKean Dargent, who is engaged to a young Mr. Sargent, of New Haven or somewhere in Connecticut. I could not just swear where. Well, it was great last night, as I said before.

GOOD night! Two more rummage sales in the offing! One next week at 1725 Chestnut street on Wednesday and Thursday, and this is for the benefit of St. Ann's Home for Aged Women at 2016 Race street, which is cared for by the Sisters of St. Margaret, an Episcopal sisterhood, you know. I hear this sale is to be quite unusual, as the committee has had such a remarkable number of perfectly new donations. Then the second affair opens on April 9 at 809 Chestnut street, and will be for the social service work of the Jefferson Hospital.

Did you hear that Heath Bannard, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heath Bannard, of 2302 De Lancey street, has been made a captain in the 310th Field Artillery? And I hear he also is acting battalion adjutant. He's with the army of occupation in Grincourt, France, at present. Heath was originally a City Trooper and served with the troop on the Mexican border three summers ago. On leaving there he was commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry. He went through the officers' training camp at Fort Niagara, and was then commissioned a first lieutenant in the field artillery and assigned to the 310th Field Artillery, Seventy-ninth Division, at Camp Meade. From there he went to the school of fire at Fort Sill, Okla., thence to France in July of last year, and over there went through the officers' artillery school at La Contine.

Heath's sister, Margaret, married Ted McCawley, you remember. He's in the navy, and so when he's on the seas Margaret and their baby stay mostly with the Bannards in this city. They have been married about three years, I think; maybe more.

OUR returning soldiers certainly have some wonderful tales to tell. One of the members of a Philadelphia regiment was coming into headquarters with two German prisoners. The prisoners were walking ahead and he was following with his rifle and pack. They came to a trench and the Germans jumped it, but when our man jumped he fell in, for his rifle and pack were too heavy. Well, do you think those Germans ran? Not a bit of it. They climbed down into the trench, helped our hero up and, finding he had broken his arm, one took his gun and the other his pack and they proceeded on ahead while he followed, holding his arm with the other one.

When they reached a dressing station the two prisoners stood outside and refused to give themselves up to any one else to take them back to the lines. No, they were his prisoners, and so they waited patiently until his arm was set and then they started off again, carrying his things for him until they reached the lines and he handed them over to the authorities and was himself sent to the hospital for further treatment. Can you beat it?

Mr. Arthur H. Eyles, Jr., will be his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Mr. William Heyrick and Mr. W. Earle Miller. The wedding will be a quiet one owing to the recent death of the bride's father. Upon their return from their wedding trip, Eyles and his bride will be at home at 5736 Thompson street.

TO ANGLICIZE JEWISH CLASSICS
One of Plans for Consideration at Dropsie College
The Jewish Publication Society will hold its annual meeting tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, at Dropsie College, Broad and York streets. The principal speaker will be Abraham S. Elihu, former ambassador to Turkey. He will discuss the part the 4,000,000 English-speaking Jews will play in the reconstruction of the world.

And among the subjects to be discussed will be the translation of the Jewish classics into English, the establishment of a Hebrew university, and the project of preparing commentaries for their translation of the Bible. This will cost about $200,000.
A luncheon at the Mercantile Club will precede the meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4:30. It will be given by Alexander Marx, Samuel Straus, Louis Ginsberg, Henrietta Szold, all of New York, and Jacob H. Hollander, Louis J. Rosenberg, Max L. Margolis, Solomon Solich, Cohen, Henry Mailer, Horace Stern, and Ephraim Lederer. The president of the society is Simon Miller.

A FAMILY "GROUP"

MRS. CLARENCE B. FOW AND HER SON, ALBERT SAMSON FOW. MRS. RALPH MULL AND HER SON, RALPH MULL, JR. In the two pictures are grandmother, daughter, son, sister, brother, uncle, nephew, grandson and mother. The explanation of this interesting list of relations is that Mrs. Fow is the mother of Mrs. Mull, and both are shown with their sons. Mrs. Fow and Mrs. Mull live in Jenkintown.

MISS PUTNAM WEDS NEW YORKER TODAY

Interesting Wedding Takes Place at Noon, Followed by Breakfast
Of much social interest in the wedding of Miss Kathleen Putnam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Putnam, of 1226 Spruce street, and Mr. William D. Crane, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Crane, of 410 Park avenue, New York, which took place at noon today in the Church of St. Luke and the Epiphany, Thirtieth street below Spruce. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. David M. Steele, D. D., rector of the church, assisted by the Rev. Charles S. Lewis, rector of St. Mary's Church, Burlington, N. J., an uncle of Mr. Crane.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with the waist of rare lace and the train lined with cloth of silver. Her veil of tulle was arranged with a coronet of rose point lace and was caught with orange blossoms. Miss Lois Loring Jackson, the maid of honor, wore a gown of blue pique with tulle and a lorgnon hat trimmed with blue. Miss Lenore McCall, Miss Margaret Supple, Mrs. George F. Montgomery, of New York, sister of the bridegroom, Miss Mary Sanger, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Marietta Doolittle and Miss Lois Kellogg, of Utica, N. Y., were the bridesmaids. They were dressed alike in pink pussywillow tulle with a narrow band of blue velvet outlining the waist. Their hats of blue georgette crepe had pink horsehair trimming.

The ushers were Mr. Thomas C. P. Martin, and the ushers were Mr. Oliver H. Perry, Mr. Loyal E. Sewall, Mr. James H. Volkman, Mr. Joseph Melien, of New York; Mr. Alfred Putnam, the bridegroom's brother, Mr. Joseph M. Gazzam, Jr., of this city. The service was followed by a breakfast at the home of the bride's parents for the families and a few intimate friends.

PROVIDE GIRLS APLENTY AT SERVICE MEN'S CLUB

United Organization Announces Spring Schedule of Entertainment Available
Directors of the United Service Club, 207 South Twenty-second street, have planned a full schedule to answer the demands of service men for entertainment and aid this spring.

Mothers and sisters of sailors and soldiers have a great part in helping the boys chase away the blues. The club is reaching many of the wounded, as well as enlisted men not yet dismissed from service.
Every Tuesday evening there is a dancing class, under a capable instructor and with plenty of pretty girls as partners. Thursday the club gives an entertainment at the navy yard. Friday evenings are devoted to vaudeville at the club, followed by dancing.

There is also a dance on Saturday evening. Invitations are sent to sisters and friends of enlisted men. Once a month the boys will be allowed to invite girls whom they know, but who have no friends here. Once a month the Girl Scouts participate in the Saturday evening program.
Sunday afternoons the club is thrown open to service men. There is music and refreshments are served. Women enter the Union for an entertain and serve them. The women are now going in automobiles for wounded men each Sunday and taking them to the club for the entertainment.

Women members of the club regularly visit all hospitals of the city, taking fruit, flowers and sweets to the wounded soldiers, sailors and marines.

SAME VIEWS ON DEMOCRACY

Lincoln and Wilson Attitudes Identical, Say Girard College Head
Lincoln and Wilson are exponents of identical views on democracy were compared in a lecture last night by Dr. Cheesman A. Herrick, president of Girard College. Doctor Herrick spoke at the Hotel Adelphia, "Bygone" ground and Mount Vernon streets.

"Lincoln in his time, the trying days of the Civil War, exercised keen foresight," said Doctor Herrick, "in that he had not only an ideal and that was to preserve the Union of the States. He embodied the highest ideals of American democracy in his acts, and should be credited with the splendid contribution he made in the successful prosecution of the great world conflict."

"Thus we can liken our present President to Lincoln in that the two men have showed that the same ideals and antecedents guided them."
"Wilson's efforts to have matters amicably adjusted between nations today are identical with Lincoln's efforts to make the successful transition between the several states of this country during the Civil War."

Chemical Society Smoker Tonight
The fourth annual smoker of the Philadelphia section, American Chemical Society, will be held tonight in the Hotel Adelphia. Colonel William H. Walker, C. W. S. U. S. A., will give an illustrated lecture on gas warfare. The meeting will be featured by music, refreshments and high-class vaudeville. The chairman of the committee is Albert G. Peterkin, Jr.

DRAW INTENSIVE PLAN FOR SUFFRAGE DRIVE

Meetings Will Pave Way for Women's Party Conference in April
Arrangements are being completed for an intensive suffrage campaign in Philadelphia and for the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania branch of the National Woman's party which will open here April 26.

Meetings will be held in all sections of the city and in the suburbs previous to the conference, to stimulate interest in the special session of Congress expected to be called in May.

In connection with the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania branch, there will be a conference of middle state chairmen of suffrage, and a public mass meeting on Sunday, April 27.

Miss Mary A. Burnham has been appointed chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements. Assisting her are Miss Marie Kennedy, Miss Martha Davis and Miss Harriet Dulles. Miss Ella Riegel is chairman of the arrangements for the mass meeting. Miss Riegel studied political economy under President Wilson.

MISS TAFT TO PRESIDE AT RALLY FOR LEAGUE

Noted Speakers at Women's Mass-Meeting on Nations' Covenant Tomorrow
A mass meeting of the league of nations will be held in the Bellevue-Stratford ball room at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

This meeting will be under the auspices of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, the Women's Trade Union League and the Pennsylvania League of Women Workers' Clubs.

Miss Helen Taft, dean of Bryn Mawr, will preside in the place of her father, former President Taft, who cannot be present.

The speakers will be Miss Julia Latrop, chief of the Children's Bureau, Department of Labor, who has just returned from Paris; George W. Anderson of the United States Circuit Court, in Boston, a trustee of the World Peace Foundation, and Miss Pauline Newman, a Russian, organizer for the Women's Trade Union League, who will speak for the laboring woman from wide experience.

Many women's organizations, representing church, musical, literary, social and educational clubs, as well as private schools and some of the high schools, will send delegates as a public endorsement of the league. These organizations will occupy boxes.

A tableau on the league of nations will be presented by Mrs. Otis Skinner, and community singing will be led by Albert E. Seymour, of the University of Pennsylvania. Mrs. Burt McCall, Miss Elizabeth Kilduff, for many years president of the College Club, and chairman of the local alumnae council of the Association of Collegiate Alumnae, is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

RUSSIAN GIRLS SEND GIFT TO SCHOOL HERE

Handkerchief Made by Children to Be Prize for Best Letter of Thanks
From far-away Archangel, in bleak Russia, a handkerchief made by little Russian girls has come to this city through the Junior Red Cross and has been turned over to the Holmes School, Fifty-fifth and Chestnut streets, by Henry J. Geddon, chairman.

This gift of the little Russians is to be the basis of a rather keen competition among the boys and girls of the school, for each of them is to be asked to write a letter of thanks, and the best is to be sent back to the little children in Archangel.

The letter, too, will be a recital of the manner in which the school children of this country live and work and study, an object lesson to the little ones abroad of how their American cousins treat their education and live their ordered lives.

Incidentally, the history of this handkerchief that has traveled thousands of miles to its new owners is rather dramatic, and is told in the following fashion by Captain D. C. Lively, of the Red Cross, in a letter written on January 17 in Archangel:
"Among the schools of Archangel are a number of orphanages. At the Christmas tree celebration of the Alexandroff Orphanage, to which the American Red Cross officer who looks after the school luncheon was invited, an address was delivered by one of the girls, who, after expressing the sentiment of Russia toward America and the Red Cross, presented a number of dainty hand-worked handkerchiefs to be sent to American children."
"I am sending the handkerchiefs to you under separate cover in the hope that they will be distributed to certain schools. There are only fifty of them and I realize that they are some way it will be necessary to select the schools and the children who are to receive them. I am sure, however, that you will know how to make this selection."

JASTROW SHOWS HOW EAST AND WEST DIFFER

Kipling's Couplet Chosen as Theme for Houston Hall Lecture This Afternoon
Professor Morris Jastrow, Jr., in a talk at Houston Hall, University of Pennsylvania, this afternoon chose for his subject Kipling's famous couplet:

"East and West was best, And never the twain shall meet."

Professor Jastrow showed that this statement was only half true and gave illustrations of the way in which the East and West are continually meeting and have mutually influenced each other.

"The East," said Doctor Jastrow, "gives us religion and the West, science."
"The speculative element in religion is largely the contribution of the western world, which finds its most notable expression in the philosophical systems of the Greeks."
"The contrast between East and West may be seen likewise in literature. The East does not aim in its literary expression to give life a romantic aspect. Romance is not indigenous in western literature. In place of it we have the drama, which is a realistic effort to interpret life in its reality, its lights and shadows. (There is no drama in ancient eastern literature, except as a reflection of western influence.)"

"In art, the East gives us elaborate decorations, a western question for the East and an Eastern question for the West."
"We must not make the East a cheap imitation of the West. The East should remain the East, and the West should be the West. The West should bring to the East improved methods of government, of hygiene and sanitation, as well as western ideas of education, and all the best achievements of western science, but it should not try to imitate the East or only be brought about if we also take care to preserve that peculiar attitude toward life which has always been characteristic of the East, and which is the source of the specific contributions that the East has made to civilization, from days of remote antiquity and straight down through the Middle Ages until Turkish misgovernment and the old East without producing a new one."

WOMEN WORLD'S SPENDERS, MISSIONARY WORKER ASSERTS

Pay for Ships, Ostrich Farms, "for Which Men Slave," She Says
"Women are the spenders of the world," declares Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, president of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society, in a plea to the Young Men's Christian Association to aid the $6,000,000 Victory campaign.

The Rev. Dr. J. Foster Wilcox, director of the campaign in the eastern Pennsylvania district, has received a letter from Mrs. Montgomery, in which she says:
"All the ships, all the diamond mines, the ostrich farms, the ostrich farms, the ostrich farms, we buy. If there isn't money enough to do God's work, the sin lies at our door. Baptists should stop doing out pennies for the ostrich farms, and give the money for reconstruction work at home and abroad."

TO DEDICATE MEMORIAL

Emmanuel Church Will Install Handsome War Window
Names of 129 members of the church who served in the war are on a handsome stained glass window, which will be dedicated at Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, York and Seivoy streets, tomorrow evening.

The memorial window is the result of the efforts of the Honor Roll Club, of which Joseph A. Rodgers is chairman. The club raised the money and planned the window. Patriotic emblems and the names of colors lend themselves to artistic design in the make-up of the window. Stained American flags and the majestic eagle stand out just above the long rows of names.
Edward E. Beldeman, Lieutenant Colonel of Pennsylvania, and Fletcher W. Stites will speak. The Rev. Frank V. C. Cloak, pastor of the church, will preside. A special song service will be under the direction of Albert N. Hoxie.

MEDICAL MAN QUILTS SHIPYARD

Dr. J. J. Reilly Retires in Reorganization at Hog Island
Dr. J. J. Reilly, medical supervisor of the Hog Island shipyard, has resigned and the work is now in the hands of Dr. J. J. Show and his assistant, Dr. W. F. Holmes. Dr. Show was formerly director of the emergency hospital.
This change is in connection with efforts to change the medical staff of the plant to a peace-time basis.
A short review of the work done by the medical department at Hog Island during the war has been issued in the form of a statement by the medical department, which describes the results obtained as to good health and sanitation as "phenomenal," and a triumph for the art of medicine and surgery.
With as many as 30,000 men and women working under all the strain of wartime conditions, there has been no epidemic of sickness and very few accidents occurred in the carrying out of the work of the plant.

RACHMANINOFF AGAIN SCORES GREAT SUCCESS

Great Pianist Plays His Own Concerto With the Orchestra. Rabaud Symphony Given
Sergei Rachmaninoff, gigantic alike in physique and in musical personality, was the feature of yesterday afternoon's concert of the Philadelphia Orchestra at the Academy of Music. He played his own concerto in F sharp minor with an orchestration which he revised after his flight from the Russian Bolsheviks.

The concerto is his first published work, being opus 1. It was composed before he was nineteen years old and is an extraordinarily mature work for that age, considered simply from the thematic material and the way in which it is developed, without regard to the revised orchestration. Even at that time the concerto bears the hallmark of the mature Rachmaninoff in its seriousness of character, its melancholy, though without the hopelessness which characterizes so much of the music of the Russian, and in the magnificent musical workmanship with which it is carried out.

As the concerto stands, it will compare favorably with the second of the opus 1, C minor, which Mr. Rachmaninoff played here some time ago with the Boston Orchestra. There is in the first perhaps a little more elasticity of thought, as shown by the stronger contrasts of the main themes, but the second is the more homogeneous in its entirety. The new orchestration played yesterday is very effective, especially in the use of the various moods of the main themes, in their tonal relation to the piano and to each other, besides being conservative in the dynamic qualities.

Mr. Rachmaninoff's playing has been discussed in these columns several times this season, and yesterday's performance gave no reason to change in any way the high estimate of his work as a pianist. He is still greater as a musician, and it is this quality in his playing that gives him a peculiar position among the leading pianists of the world, and as a composer, with his thought always concentrated on his composition as a whole and not alone on his solo part. Beauty of tone and technical work in his playing is also suffering that Mr. Stokowski has had with him, with grip, felt himself exhausted and had asked Mr. Rich, the concertmaster and assistant conductor, to lead the symphony.

For the second of the main themes, which assumed the baton at a moment's notice and conducted with skill and understanding.
"The symphony was that in B minor," by Henri Rabaud, which he has played here. It is a fine work, having much more of the real symphonic spirit than most French works of this character and is artistically worked out and conducted. The second and third movements are the most attractive. The second is a tuneful slow movement of much beauty of melody, and the third is a scherzo, which is a splendid example of the conservative modern school, being sane in thought, harmony and composition, while retaining all the poetry and the distinctive nationalism of the composer.

After the concerto Mr. Mattson announced that he had received a letter from the composer, with grip, felt himself exhausted and had asked Mr. Rich, the concertmaster and assistant conductor, to lead the symphony. For the second of the main themes, which assumed the baton at a moment's notice and conducted with skill and understanding.
"The symphony was that in B minor," by Henri Rabaud, which he has played here. It is a fine work, having much more of the real symphonic spirit than most French works of this character and is artistically worked out and conducted. The second and third movements are the most attractive. The second is a tuneful slow movement of much beauty of melody, and the third is a scherzo, which is a splendid example of the conservative modern school, being sane in thought, harmony and composition, while retaining all the poetry and the distinctive nationalism of the composer.

PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA TO REPEAT PROGRAM AT WEIGHTMAN HALL

Encouraged by the success of the concert given by the Philadelphia Orchestra at the University of Pennsylvania, recently, Director Leopold Stokowski has consented to give a second concert in Weightman Hall April 19. This was announced today at the University.
A novel feature of this second concert is the choice of program by means of a vote taken among the student body. Doctor Stokowski will name a number of symphonies and a list of overtures from which the students can choose those they would like most to hear. The list of compositions to be made public next week.
This concert, like the first, will be under the auspices of the Franklin Society. John Lovitt, a junior in the college, will have charge of the arrangements. Dates and details will be announced under consideration by the committee for a series of from four to six concerts to be held on the campus next year.
